LAMPIRE is a leading supplier of abattoir-derived glands, tissues, organs, blood and fluids. Located in Pennsylvania, in close proximity to the top beef, veal and porcine USDA approved abattoir facilities in the United States, LAMPIRE provides abattoir-derived products for academic research as well as raw materials for the production of pharmaceuticals and medical devices worldwide.

Due to increased regulations imposed by the USDA/FDA on the food industry and abattoir facilities, abattoir blood products and tissues are more traceable, affordable and readily available for research use. Abattoir-derived products are a cost-effective alternative to donor material. See our product listing or contact Customer Service for more information.
